About the course

The challenges posed by the current migration pressure call for a concerted and coordinated approach by the Law Enforcement and Border Control Agencies of the Member States, together with their counterparts in transit countries and with the JHA Agencies Europol, Eurojust, EASO and Frontex.

CEPOL - European Police College has amended its Annual Work Programme 2015 in order to include a migration training offer of four residential activities to be implemented between the end of January and the beginning of March 2016. The content of the four activities will focus on migration management and countering illegal migration. The general aim is to make sure that a significant number of key actors who are deployed or will be deployed at external borders and along the migration routes will enhance their knowledge on the EU common policies and strategies, with the expected result that knowledge gained will improve their performance, supervision role and actions in the field of migration.

Residential activity 89/2015 is gathering law enforcement officials from EU Member States and Candidate countries. It puts the focus on strategic and operational policing issues linked to the unprecedented migration flows. Participants will deepen their knowledge in the light of the recent developments and improve their capacities to evaluate problematic situations and police strategies and partnerships linked to migration.

With the establishment of new tools and mechanisms, the Commission also intends to improve the exchange of information and the cooperation between the EU agencies and national law enforcement agencies operating at the frontline, both in transit and destination countries. HotSpots and EU RTF, JOT Mare, better use of large scale IT systems for the detection of illegal immigrants and terrorist fighters, standard procedures for asylum applications and returns, narratives on the Internet etc. are some of the many European initiatives to control the migration flows and to counter migrant smuggling. Residential activity 89/2015 intends to propose a practical approach and make sure that law enforcement officers participating in the training will be able to make use of appropriate tools available in given situations.
